Dementia in Dental Environments

Ronine Sharp is an RN, certified personal consultant on aging and is a senior's care advocate. She is called the memory nurse. Her passion and focuses are on aging, the brain, and dementia. She creates strategies to maintain memory in the brain. Her mission is to empower, coach professionals and families while leading them through this rocky path.

This presentation will focus on dementia, behaviours and interventions for the oral care professionals. Establishing a dental care program in early dementia helps the client and the dental professional in the beginning stages of dementia. It also helps establish rapport and strengthen the relationship to allow long term interventions.

Malocclusion &TMD

Dr. Curtis Westersund earned his DDS from the University of Alberta in Edmonton. He has practiced as a general dentist in the city of Calgary in the province Alberta Canada for 36 years. Dr. Westersund's practice is limited to the treatment of TemporalMandibular disorders (TMD) with a physiologic approach. He holds a Mastership with the International College of Cranio-Mandibular Orthopedics.

How can understanding TMD alter your approach to helping both patients of record as well as patient referrals from medical doctors, lawyers and even other dentists.

TMD is not limited to the 2 inches around the TMJ. Discover the structural, muscular, neural and physiologic affects of TMD on the head, neck and body.

TMD is related to two problems: the mandible is in the wrong place and the occlusion is unbalanced. By using ULF TENS and Tscan, treating TMD can be predictable, simple and effective.
